Dale Carnegie Seminars presenting “Stress Management Workshop”

ST. CHARLES COUNTY, MO --- A “Stress Management Workshop” will be presented by Dale Carnegie Seminars at the next Alliance training program offered by the Economic Development Center (EDC) of St. Charles County on Thursday, May 25 at St. Peters City Centre.

This four-hour workshop will begin at 7:30 a.m. and is part of 16 professional training seminars scheduled for 2006. The speaker will be Jonathan Jones, a certified leadership instructor for Dale Carnegie Training – St. Louis and an independent management consultant.

Alliance members may attend the four-hour May 25 event for free. The general public is also welcome and admission is $125. Advance registration is required and going on now. Continuing education credit will be awarded to participants. Full breakfast will be served.

At this seminar, attendees will be introduced to the 30 powerful principles in Dale Carnegie’s best-seller, How to Stop Worrying and Start Living. These effective concepts can be used to reduce the stress level in the workplace and in participant’s personal lives.

The 2006 Alliance series is sponsored in part by 90.7 KWMU FM. The May 25 seminar is co-sponsored by T.R. Hughes, Inc., a home-building giant in metro St. Louis.

Following this seminar, the Alliance will be on summer break until September. Half-price annual memberships are now available for businesses and organizations interested in receiving world-class training through Dale Carnegie and SkillPath, courtesy of the EDC.
